With some, its fishing, with others, golf, tennis, or stamp collecting and on and on. With us, its chess.

Unusual? I am sure most of you have had many occasions (as have I) to receive that sudden quick glance of curiosity when you tell someone your hobby. Golfers don't get that!

Perhaps it is because so many think chess as rather foreign and beyond them that I have had some difficulty in interesting teachers and school administrators in starting up their own chess club.

Many will say that they don't have time. Many claim they know too little or nothing about chess, and therefore can't teach. The truth is: they've not been bit by the chess bug and just don't share our interest. We have to accept that.

The day will come, I think, when this will change, when there will be interest, even among non-players, and chess will be an "in" thing. Certainly, I intend to do what I can to make my hobby a popular pass time. But there is much to do between now and then, so how 'bout a hand?

How 'bout starting a chess club in a school near you? Now is the time to get organized. Contact the principal -he loves volunteers-and be prepared for a warm welcome. Then call or write me; there is a great deal of help I can arrange.

Would you like to receive a guide to organizing the club? Some pamphlets? A teaching outline? Some advice? (Its Free!) Maybe even some chess sets!!

All you add is your commitment, a dab of courage and about two hours per week.

Think about this: Tennessee is acknowledged as having one of the nation's fine scholastic chess programs. We have teams from forty schools and over three hundred youngsters playing in our scholastic tournaments. Yet there are well over 1000 schools in the state. The potential is practically unlimited!

Please, pick a school and play e4. And let me hear from you. My address and phone are included among the list of TCA Directors.

EVANS ON CHESS

White mates in 2 moves
OFFBEAT OPENINGS

In the frantic search for newness, moves once considered awful are now hailed as theoretical novelties. We tend to forget that some openings regarded as indispensable were once scorned.

The Nimzo-Indian Defense (1 d4 Nf6 2 c4 e6 3 Nc3 Bb4!) used to be condemned as ugly. Nimzovich replied to his critic that "the beauty of a chess move lies not in its appearance, but in the thought behind it."

Nowadays monographs and cassettes deal with offbeat lines without names that were lumped together as irregular. MYERS OPENINGS BULLETIN is an obscure, struggling American magazine devoted to weird and wonderful openings both old and new. ($18 yearly. 1506 1/2 Harrison, Davenport, Iowa 52803.)

Pergamon Press in England has just issued PLAY THE ST. DRAGON by Michael Basman for anyone willing to shell out $10 for the 122-page paperback. What is the St. George and how did it get its name?

Basman writes: "It is a universal defense, playable against both 1 e4 and 1 d4. Its characteristic moves are 1...e6, a6, and b5. The most famous victory using this opening was Karpov's defeat by Miles in 1980, the first time a British player had defeated a reigning world champion for 20 years. St. George shows on the one hand that this defense was developed by English players--and on the other that it was used in heroic rearguard circumstances. St. George, to my knowledge, only killed one dragon and Miles has only beaten Karpov once."

It was introduced by British amateur John Baker at a London chess club during a rare blindfold display by Blackburne and Steinitz in 1868. Baker beat them both with this crazy defense!

Wilhelm Steinitz, who went on to become world champ in 1872, held the title for 22 years. Playing without sight of the board, he overlooked that 27 f3 holds everything.

The Sicilian Wing Gambit

A Book Review by Kenny Thomas

I must confess I have always considered the Wing Gambit unsound. Reading John Hurt's new book, Sicilian Wing Gambit (Thinkers' Press, $7) did not change my mind.

The really attractive feature of the Wing Gambit is not so much that you get Black out of his book, but that the positions which arise are so un-Sicilian-like. What Black player can conceive of getting in ...e5 and d5, then having a White N settle in at d6? Or to see a maneuver like Ra1-a4-h4? Or to see his Q constantly harassed without getting behind in development? All this and more is possible. Unfortunately, Hurt's book has no text, only columns of analysis; so there is no exposition of the underlying ideas, which is an absolute necessity where the ideas are so unusual.

Another problem is that Hurt rarely gives best play for Black in his analysis. In a way this is an advantage, since you are unlikely to face best play, even against strong opposition. I once saw Senior Master Ken Smith flounder into a lost position against Hurt in less than 20 moves, though he later wriggled away and won. If you study Hurt's book properly and figure out all the ideas, you can look forward to many pleasant games where Black won't know what hit him. Unfortunately, if you're Black, the lack of "best play" analysis makes it impossible to tell where to improve. Lucky for you, I'll tell you.

(1) In the minor lines of pp. 2-5, just follow Geller in ECO. Hurt's evaluations are overly optimistic, with "=" or "+=" where Geller has a slight plus for Black. I checked the positions and I think Geller is right.

(2) In the Santasiere Variation, pp 7-10, you're on your own. This is uncharted territory, except for an original analysis in Chess Digest, which I have not seen. My provisional suggestion for Black would be something like 1. e4 c5 2. b4 cb4 3. c4 e6 4. d4 d5 5. Nd2 Nc6 6. Ngf3 Nf6 7. Bd3 de4 8. Ne4 and now instead of Hurt's pawn-grubbing Nxd4?, try 8...Nxe4 9. Bxe4 Bd6 exchanging a piece and preparing to castle.

(3) In the main line, pp 11-30, adopt the continuation of p. 29, since White has virtually no good alternative to it. After all, main lines are main lines for a good reason. The only one you might want to note is column 58, p.21:

1. e4 c5 2. b4 cb 3. a3 d5 4. ed Qxd5 5. Nf3 e5 6. ab Bxb4 7. Ba3

Here the correct continuation is that of note 1: 7...Bxa3 8. Rxa3 (according to Hurt 8. Nxa3 is better for Black) 8...Nc6 9. Nc3 Qd6 10. Nb5 Qe7 11. Qa1 Nf6 12. Bc4 0-0 13. 0-0 Bg4. Hurt calls this equal, attributing it to the game Barden - Fuellen. But Geller in ECO, Evans in MCO-10, and Pachman himself in Semi-Open Games say this is Podgorry - Pachman Czech Champ. 1953, and in the words of Pachman, "Black is clearly winning."

Now, I've got you to page 29, and you're undoubtedly saying, "But White stands better in every line!" Not to worry, some of the analysis is wrong. Column 78 goes 1. e4 c5 2. b4 cb4 3. a3 d5 4. ed5 Qd5 5. Nf3 e5 6. ab4 Bb4 7. c3 Bc5 8. Na3 Nf6 9. Bc4 Qe4+ 10. Be2 0-0 11. Nb5 Nc6 12. Ra4 Qf5 13. 0-0

13. ...e4. I've never played this logical move before. Hurt's analysis may encourage me to do so in the future. It goes 14. Nfd4 Nxd4 15. cd4 Bb6 16. Ba3 Rd8 17. Nd6 Qf4 18. g3 Qg5 19. Bc4 Be6 20. Bxe6 fe6 21. Nb7 winning. However, after simply 21. ...Rxd4 it seems like Black should win without too much trouble. A matter of technique, as they say.

Column 79 13. ...Nd5 is the real main line, though you wouldn't know it from the fact that Hurt only gives it one column, while giving four columns to the inferior 13. ...Rd8. The virtue of 13. ...Nd5 is that it covers c7 and attacks the soon-to-be-weakened c3 (White will play d4 and the N on b5 will be driven away by a6 eventually). First let's dispatch 14. Rh4! given without analysis. Simply 14. ...Be7 is strong, since 15. Rh3 fails to 15. ...Qb1 16. Rg3 e4 followed by an eventual ...Bh4 trapping the Rook. In any event with the B on e7, Black can meet d4 with e4 and will have no worries about Bd3 eyeing h7 as in the main line. So White correctly continues 14. d4 ed 15. Bd3 Qh5 16. cd Be7 17. Rel. Now, Hurt gives a totally faulty continuation for Black (Bg4?), which is surprising since 3 years ago I played the correct continuation against him 17...Be6! The point is that White intends Bd3-e4 x d5 and Black needs to capture with the B rather than the Q, so Nc7 won't win an exchange. Hurt-Thomas 1980 continued 18. Be4 a6 19. Bxd5 Bd5 20. Nc7 Rad8 21. Nd5 Qd5 22. Be3 a5 and Black went on to win.

Since Black gets a superior game by excepting the gambit, there is no reason to think about declining. And once you understand the gambit accepted, you can probably work out the tricks in the delayed Wing Gambit.

But as White, if you don't mind taking some risks for active play, and don't like memorizing a million lines of Najdorfs, Dragons, Taimanovs, Scheveningens, etc., the Wing Gambit may be just for you. It is no less sound than the Smith-Morra Gambit, but it will come as a much bigger surprise to your opponent. For the enterprising gambit player, this may be the new anti-Sicilian line you've been waiting for. Just do not play it against me, though unless you can find some improvements.

SCHOLASTIC CHESS

WITH PATRICK BURDICK

Contained in the July rating supplement, the U.S.C.F. has published the "Top 50" lists under a new format. Where there were three lists for scholastic players, there are now six.

I am very proud to report that Tennessee is well represented with twenty-two nationally ranked scholastic players. In fact, only New York with 62 and California with 34 have more top players than Tennessee!

Listed below are our state's contribution to the nations best young players. Congratulations to all!

For this issues' idea, I thought we should cover some basics of pawn play. Much has been written on this subject, and much of that is rather complex. So lets see if we can demonstrate five valuable rules that can be the starting point for understanding pawn play throughout the game.

Rule 1: Pawns are generally strongest when side-by-side.

Notice that the Black King must take four moves to get to d3 where he can threaten a pawn (assuming they don't move). But if White were to play b4, then Black could immediately play Ka4 or Kc4 and attack the a or c pawn. The difference of three moves could well be decisive in a real ending.

Rule 2: Push the pawn that holds up two pawns.

With White to move, he plays c5 and Black can no longer push the b-pawn without the threat of White taking it with the c-pawn, and then moving towards a queen. Notice that if Black's pawns were side-by-side, White would be unable to hold them up, a good example of rule 1! This leads us to.....

Rule 3: When you are ready to advance your pawns, advance first the pawn that does not have an enemy pawn in front of it.

With Black to move, he simply pushes b5 and white cannot prevent a passed pawn. Notice how weak white's pawn is here, compared to how strong in the previous example.

Rule 4: Pawns are most easily defended when close to their original square.

With Black to move, he easily holds a draw by moving his king towards the c-pawn and taking White's one pawn advantage. White however, can lose the game trying to hold this pawn by advancing the b pawn. Then both will fall because his King is too far away to help. (Advancing the a-pawn doesn't help, either). This leads to the last rule.

Rule 5: Advance your King in front of your pawns.

Wouldn't the above game be dramatically different if the White

King were on c6! White would win easily.

I'm sure you have already thought of examples that break these rules. I'm glad, because these ideas are not useful at all times during a game. It is knowing which rule to use when that takes study. So please don't discard these rules just because you can find exceptions. Use them, and discover how to let them work for you.

The 1983 Memphis Open

The 2nd Annual Memphis Open (formerly the Memphis in May Open) was held Memorial Day weekend (May 28-29) at the Quality Inn-Airport, 1400 Springbrook in south Memphis. The tournament received no advertising in Chess Life yet managed to attract 44 entries (10 less than last year's Memphis in May Open which boasted $1300 in guaranteed prizes).

Carl daCunha (Memphis) and Ron Burnett (Nashville) co-championed the two-day event and shared top money, although daCunha won the first place trophy on tie-breaks. Burnett's last round victory CM Johnson Moore (Nashville) allowed him to catch up with daCunha who was held to a draw by chess master Brian McCarthy (Nashville) after having won his first four games.

Both Carl and Ron have been leaving their marks on Tennessee chess events in recent months. DaCunha, a medical doctor and a native of Brazil, just moved to Memphis a couple of years ago. While in Brazil Carl "sparred" with Grandmaster Mecking on occasion, and from the looks of things he must have learned a trick or two. This year alone Carl has qualified for the Memphis City Championship, won first place on tie-breaks in the Bluff City Open, and has now won a share of the Memphis Open title.

Burnett, on the other hand, is no stranger to Tennessee chess. Ron who just finished the tenth grade at Nashville Overton is Tennessee's highest rated high school chess-player with his CM rating. Besides tying for first in the Memphis Open, Ron recently won clear first in the 1983 Tennessee Scholastics. Also among his recent credits he has qualified for the Nashville City Championship, tied for first in the Music City Winter Open, and taken a share of first in the Cumberland County Spring Open. Apparently Carl and Ron have discovered the secret for manhandling Tennessee chess events!

Other winners in the 1983 Memphis Open were:
 Albert Wright - CM
 Bill Keogh, Thomas Harley, and Nils Gentner - Cat I.
 Bill Melvin, Norman Cantor, and Guy Thompson - Cat II.
 Gus Lipman - Cat III.
 Skip Hamlett - Cat IV/below.
 Sidney Woods - top Unrated.

The tournament was directed by Jim Gallagher Sr. The Memphis Chess Club sponsored the event.

to the editor

I have been a fan of TCN for 4½ years now & lately I've been very disappointed with the exclusion of tournament crosstables in the past several issues. Contrary to some people's opinions, simply reporting the winners' names is sufficient. Many chess-players (including myself) enjoy seeing one's standing among the other players & crossreferencing other players' results. In fact, crosstables encourage participation in tournaments. I know, because I have discussed this with many Tenn. players. A crosstable gives much more info than a mere paragraph listing winners. No written word can capture the drama & excitement that is a chess event, but crosstables certainly help.

Thank you,
Jack Jeffery
