Membership Meeting: Offices Open

The Tennessee Chess Association's annual membership meeting will be held on Sunday, September 1st at the Holiday Inn in Oak Ridge at 2:00 p.m. Other than general business, new officers will be elected. Among the positions that will be open are Newsletter Editor and Postal Chess Coordinator. If anyone would like to fill any of these two-year offices, please speedily contact someone on the Board of Directors so that your offer can immediately be taken under consideration.

WORLD RATING LIST

On the semi-annual July World Chess Federation Rating List, Anatoly Karpov has regained the number one position with a 2720 rating, while Kasparov (who lead on the last three lists) dropped to 2700. Third place is held by Jan Timman of the Netherlands and Alexander Beliavsky of the Soviet Union (both 2640). Among U. S. players, Yasser Sierawan and Roman Dzindzichashvili are tied for best rated (2570). Maya Chiburdanidze of the Soviet Union tops the Women's list with 2450. The 16-year old wonder Zsuzsa Polgar of Hungary is second with 2430. Among U. S. women, Diane Savereide leads with a 2200 rating. Information from USCF News Release).

PBS Offers World Championship Coverage

(excerpts from USCF News Release)

Coverage of this fall's world championship match will again be available free of charge to Public Broadcasting System stations. An initial grant from the American Chess Foundation assures that there will be a series of 10 shows.

The weekly programs, produced by WYNE of Brooklyn and again hosted by Shelby Lyman, are in three formats. Stations have the option of airing the full 2 hours, the last 60 minutes, or the last 30 minutes of each show (each version has a separate introduction), according to the air time available. Coverage starts the first week of September.

The producers of the PBS program hope to have the participation of a galaxy of chess stars in person, on tape, or by live phone interviews, including Karpov and Kasparov, Zsuzsa Polgar, Boris Spassky, Robert Byrne, Samuel Reshevsky, William Lombardy, Yasser Seirawan, Mikhail Tal, Lev Polugaevsky, and many others.

Local chess players and organizers are urged to contact their PBS stations and express their interest in the programs. It is important to do this at once, since programming decisions are made months in advance.

For further information, contact Shelby Lyman, P. O. Box 1138, New York, NY 10025. Phone (212) 622-2616 (home) or (212) 586-3700 (answering service).

ERRATA

Two mistakes in previous issues need pointing out. The June/July issue of TCN saw me blaspheme the Postal God by confusing his eminence with Kent McCormack (page 8). The April/May issue saw a more unforgivable error committed on page 18. Here I say that Kenny Thomas is a FIDE Master just because he passed the 2200 mark. Alas, he isn't. I was reminded by David Rachels that the Fide Master (FM) title is awarded, just as the IM and GM title are. And, most pointedly, the FM title requires a FIDE rating over 2300.

The Making of A State Champion

by Leonard Dickerson

Many people have asked me how is that I have always managed to finish near the top in the Tennessee Open Championship, sharing the title twice and dropping into third place once. They marvel how I get crushed the year out but display power at the Tennessee Open. Well, I'll now reveal all.

One of the reasons that I suddenly get strong is that most of the year I pursue other involvements and don't really take my chess serious—I play for enjoyment with little real concern as to whether or not I win. Hence, (1), I have a change of attitude. My lax attitude prior to the event keeps my rating lower than my actual playing strength. I'm generally in college year-round, and the only real time I take to study chess is the month gap between the summer and winter quarter—the month before the Open. Therefore, (2), I play closer to my real strength which is generally always above my actual rating. Another real factor is (3) my manifest "luck": I suddenly jump over to the positive side of luck. Overall I feel that the major reason that I have won is my attitude.

It is my belief that when one begins to play above the 2100 level that the only thing that keeps him from becoming a master is his desire. The latent skills, imagination, and concentration are all there but waiting to be summoned by persistence and will. Hence, above this level there is no great disparity in skill—just desire and will. This is even more manifest among the amateur ranks where you don't have the studied and determined professional. Therefore when I walk into a State Championship I don't see any feared foes, only equals.

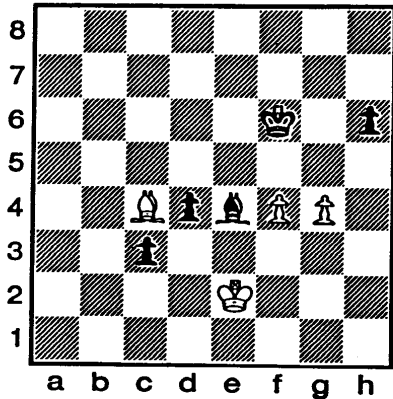

Being amongst equals reduces the winning to luck—a sure factor in many of my wins—and determination. Hence winning amongst equals is more a factor of the player's overall determination and willpower—even stamina. When skills are roughly equal, then you are playing the character and will of the person: the game becomes more a clash of personalities. Hence when a player "lucks up," you can't say de facto that luck brought him the victory. He had to survive to that point; to tire his opponent; to set up confusion, doubt, indecision; he had to exert his will and determination to the utmost and yet maintain enough poise to be ready to pounce on a last straw; and, finally, he had to have the basic skills to turn the lucky break into a victory without himself committing a mutual blunder. Amongst equals, luck, fatigue, mood, and personalities overshadow skill.

Sure I have been lucky. Consider my game with Charles Herbers in the 1984 championships. He had lambasted me since my 17th move. Of course I knew that I was dead positionally and materially—but this didn't keep me from fighting on. After all, he was nearing time trouble, and my soul was at peace knowing that I was busted but could only lose once—no matter how humiliating my position looked. Even in the face of cold analysis—a bust is at hand—I still nurtured a hope of winning! I was dying, but I was still kicking—albeit lamely. What does he do in this position. See Diagram 1. About the only move that he could make that would allow me to win—a help-win!! Another game of note comes from my 1980 Championship with Marty Appleberry. He was slaughtering me after I had saved a knight for counterplay. But while in mutual time troubles he decided to counter-sacrifice. His miscalculation gave me a space at the top. Sure I was lucky. But what one has to consider is that I myself had to experience some bad luck myself to land in this misery beforehand.

For the flip-side of the coin check this masterpiece out. After having obtained a won position against Paul Harless in the last round of the 1982 Championship I decided to please my audience with some unnecessary embellishment—and I knew that my 34th move, Be6, invited counterplay even as I played it. See Diagram 2 and Diagram 3 for some more luck. Well, so much for a won game winning itself. That draw cost me the 1982 Championship, and I stewed over it so much that I didn't even play in the 1983 Championship! In the 1984 Championship I could have safely snatched a pawn from Timberlake, but foolishly decided to press on for a "brilliant" sacrifice. See Diagram 4 of the attached games. Like the master that he is he simply ignored my stuff, survived my short-lived attack, and then offered me a draw. I refused the draw, wanting to make some attacking jestures to punish him for having made me sweat throughout the game. Well, this was even more "bad luck" for me. I immediately blotched the "attack." Further, I sit waiting for him to move while my clock ran down!! I lost. Call it bad luck if you will, but I call it nervousness and indecision fueled by doubt and negativity producing its just outcome.

L. Dickerson vs. Charles Herbers
1984 TN State Championship
Round 5 Board 5
 Position after White's 47th move. Herbers is in time trouble but still should easily win. Suddenly, he sees a sacrificial illusion. He plays 47...Bf3+. So 48. Kd3. Now he finishes with 48...Be2+??, a promotional mistake. After 49. Kxe he must resign.

1982 TN OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP

R(d)b g5 Black has only 4 minutes left to reach the 50th move.

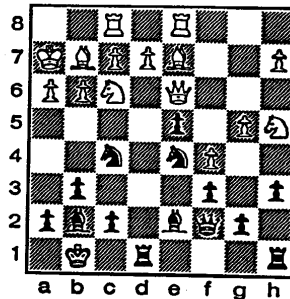

34. Be6? And now White plays as if he is in time trouble! Here 34. Ra6 wins: if 34...Ng8 then 35. Rg6; if 34...Ne4 35. Rxh+ Kg7 36. Rg6+ Kh8 (36...Kh7 then Ra7 wins) 37. Be6 or Bb3; 34...Ne8 is awful. I had spent time analyzing a risky variation that seemed to turn out okay and didn't want to give my opponent more time by me sensibly looking at saner variations. 34...Re8 35. Bxf Rx3 37. Ra8+ Ne8 37. Kg2 R(d)d2 38. Kf3 Rxf+ 39. Kg4 R(d)e2

This is the position that I saw resulting from my 34th move. I figured that it would be easily won at that time. But somehow I got rattled and played not the simple R(b)-b8 but: 40. Bg6?? Rf8 41. Bxe R(f)xe 42. R(a)-a6 R(2)-26 43. R(a)a7 Re4+ 44. Kh5 R(4)-e6 45. Rh7+ Kg 46. R(a)g+ Kf 47. Rc7 R(8)e7 48. Rc8+ 49. Rxc R(e6)-e7 50. Rxh Re3 and draws after 26 more moves.

The biggest challenge that I face in preparing for the Championship is myself. I first must remove the thoughts of doubts and negativity that rob my skills of direction and certitude. I do this by simply first establishing in my mind that I can win—whether by Cassica's help, prayer, or actual skill.

Then I attempt to imagine that I will win. I try to imagine my feeling of elation and the coming congratulations. Then I sat down to serious study of Openings and some of my manifest weaknesses. And as I study, I visualize myself actually moving through the board positions at the Open. The games that I play up to the tournament are directed toward the Championship. I set my mind to win and dedicate my study and play to the Open. Sure it takes some skill to win the TN Championship, but you can only play your best from a confident poise.

Lincoln Memorial University Open

The LMU Open held June 28-30 in Harrogate, Tennessee had a splendid introductory offering extraordinary scenery & great chess. The very strong 36-player Open Section produced many surprising tales of woe—but even the losers were uplifted by the beauty of the rustic surroundings. The appeal of the quality tournament was so great that it even brought Mark Diesen from out of hibernation—to his joy. For he and IM Boris Kogan split the $700 1st prize with 4.5-.5 scores, drawing in the last round with each other. Dennis Gogel took clear third with four wins. The Amateur Section also saw a two-way tie for 1st, with Tim McHenry and Alan Gullette garnering 4.5 points. Among these competitive sections the only prize that wasn't shared was Paul Jordan's Class C triumph, taking a clear first and $200. The Novice Section saw a three way tie result in the 12 player event. Lynn McHenry, Michael Lipkin, and Jeff Wicker Split the money with 4-1 scores.

See the listing of prize winners for more details.

This respectable tournament was organized by Dr. Al Lipkin and is planned to become an annual event, rivalled only by the Mid-South and Fairfield Glade Open. With the muscle that the tourney attracted, it is likely that it may grow to the stature of the LPO—another of Lipkin's works. Tennessee is indeed honored to be able to add this major event to its yearly offerings.

The puzzling thing about my attitude is that though I have "programmed" myself to win, I am really not taking a back or upset over a loss. You see, it depends on how I lose. As long as I feel that I played near my potential then I have no grief over the game. ("Fishing Out" is another thing!) One can only play their best. If someone else's best is better, then so be it. You don't really lose when you do your best. You just fail to win this encounter.

Now, the secrets are out for all to exploit. Yes, I win by luck. But my luck is backed by an essential body of skill and a positive attitude. The good point about having a sober attitude toward my victory is that if I get stomped in the upcoming 1985 TN Open Championship I will still be smiling. For somewhere deep in me is the potential to again rise as the Phoenix.

RULES FOR TEAM COMPETITION IN

THE TENNESSEE OPEN

1. A team shall consist of at least 4 persons, but not more than 7 persons, and shall represent only one city, club or county in the state of Tennessee.
2. A list of team members must be submitted to the tournament director by the end of registration for the tournament.
3. Each team shall designate a team captain who shall have the authority to act on behalf of the team.
4. Team members must be a member of the club they represent or must reside in the city or county being represented by them.
5. All team members must play in the same section. However, the same club, city or county may enter a team in each section or more than one team in each section.
6. Team members will not be paired against each other during the tournament unless the tournament director deems it necessary in order to reasonably comply with the Swiss system rules.
7. Team scores at the end of the tournament shall be determined by adding the final individual scores of the top four team members. If two teams tie for first, the cumulative tie break system will be used (using the team score) to determine the winner of the trophies in the amateur and novice sections. If two teams tie for first in the open section, they shall be co-champions and both names shall be entered on the plaque.
8. The tournament director shall have the absolute authority to resolve any disputes over eligibility of team members, pairings, scores, or any other matters involving the team competition.
9. Team winners in the novice and amateur sections will receive a trophy. The team winner in the open section shall have its name entered upon the R. S. Scrivener Team Plaque and shall keep possession of the plaque for one year.
10. The winning team in the open section is responsible for having its name engraved on the plaque and is responsible for the care of the plaque while it is in its possession.
11. The R. S. Scrivener Plaque shall be replaced every ten years with the old plaque being given to the team which won same the greatest number of times.

EDITOR'S FAREWELL

by Leonard Dickerson

My term as editor of TCN comes to an end in September. A desire to continue with my schooling on an excellerated level and give more attention to playing chess itself will discourage me from starting a new term.

Taking the paper's editorship was a challenge that I accepted reluctantly, but am very glad that I did take it. At a more convenient future I will be glad to return to the post, if it is available.

Those who are interested in assuming this position should immediately make their intent known and plan to be on hand for the Annual Membership Meeting which is to be held on Sunday, September 1 at the Holiday Inn in Oak Ridge at 2:00 p.m. Contact any of the officers, preferably Sabine or myself. They will, of course, give any support necessary to assure the smoothness of the power transfer.

For the interest of those who may consider this post, all monies (telephone calls, travel, supplies, etc. relating to the paper) are immediately reimbursed. Help is extended by all officers for support and guidance, where requested. Unfortunately for the new editor, though, you will be denied the company of Kent Meadows. Still, your term can be golden, as support is had by the asking. After getting my act coordinated, I'd estimate that the job averages 40-50 hours per two-month period. One more efficient could probably reduce this to 30 hours.

My thanks go to Larry Thomas, who gave me a running start by typing out the mailing list. Also, I would like to thank the TCA officers for their support and the contributing editors. Too, I must thank Cynthia Manley for her help. Her assistance simplified many of my tasks.

My thanks came from Tim Redman, Past President of USCF and a Policy Board Member. He wrote me a letter of encouragement on June 11, 1985 stating that TCN is "without question...among the five best" state publications. A smile masks much pain. Thank you for allowing me to serve you.

Here is an instructive game turned in by Douglas Ralston, showing why he shared the Expert Prize at the LMU Open with 4-1 score. Black commits a positional error, and Doug exploits it like a Reshevsky.

RATINGS AND THE CUMULATIVE

I've heard many a player commenting upon a master losing to a much, much lower-rated player as if the master had suffered an irrecoverable loss and was doomed to drop tons of rating points. And, in fact, could give the tournament up as far as upgrading his rating was concerned. Well, the USCF's rating system says that as long as there is the promise of the higher-rated player playing someone as far above him rating-wise as the range of the lower-rated player that he lost to—then he should definitely play on. Another interesting and positive point of the rating system is that this someone need not be a single player. This "one" can be the remainder of his opponents!

Tournament ratings are based on the cumulative—not on single opponents. As far as impersonal ratings are concerned, it is no worse for an expert to lose to a 1300 player as it is for him to lose to a 2300 player! (Pride is another thing.) For instance, suppose we have a typical five-round event where Expert X succumbs to a 1300 player in the first round. Further, assume that the expert's other opponents are rated, respective to rounds, 1700, 1800, 2000, and 2300. Assume further that upon being shocked to life that the expert's adrenalin pours and he wins the rest of his games. We'll now see how post-tournament ratings are compiled for such an event.

First, a quick introduction to the formula that will be used. The main equation is: New Rating "K" (Wins—Win Expectancy). Here "K" is a point-limit constant varying from 32 to an additional 3 points for each round above four up to ten tournament rounds. In our case K would equal 35. The "win expectancy" is based on the odds that you should beat a player rated a range of points above or below your rating. You can calculate the "win expectancy" or "We" by hand or use the USCF's handy charts. For our 2100 Expert the win expectancies are, based on rating difference:

Rating Difference	Win Expectancy
+ 800	0.990
+ 400	0.909
+ 300	0.849
+ 100	0.640
- 200	0.240

Total "We" = 3.628

The minus on the 200-point rating difference accounts for the fact that the master's rating is above the expert's rating. The "We"

gives the expert a statistical chance of beating the master 1 out of 4 games. On the other hand it further says that the expert is not expected to lose but 1 out of 100 games to a 1300 player.

To calculate his post-tournament rating we can ignore Bonus Points (points awarded to winners who play better than is statistically expected, exceeding the tournament's "K") and Feedback Points (points awarded to losers who faced sharks disguised with minnow ratings). However, we must recognize Boundaries. A 2100 expert can win or lose only 75 percent of what players below 2100 get, while a 2300 can win or lose only 50 percent. So, we must adjust whatever new rating we get by multiplying it by 75 percent. On with the show... Based on the above equation we get: $\text{New Rating} = 2100 + 35 \times (4 - 3.628) \times 0.75 = 2110$. Hence Expert X nets 10 points. Interestingly enough, doing this calculation for a win over the 1300 and a loss to the 2300 player (or any of the others for that matter) gives the same final rating result! However, in a one-game match he would have lost 26 points to the lower-rated player but only 6 points to the master!

Another look. A 5.5 point loss results from losing to the 1300 player and beating the master (-25.5 + 20.0, respectively) or vice versa (+1 + (-6.4)), giving the same final cumulative total after "K" modification and boundary adjustments. (You must get at least a whole point for a win; so beating the 1300 shows up as a 1 instead of a fraction.) So, it isn't the rating of any one player who you may lose to—or win over—that decides your rating, but your tournament performance as a whole. Conversely, if you catch a master napping and nip him, don't get over-inflated and lose to everyone else—you still will lose points (but not your thrill!).

Your reasons for withdrawing from a tournament may be valid—distance from home, off-form, sick, scared, etc.—but consider that taking one or two disastrous losses may not hurt you that much providing that the caliber of your overall opposition remains high.

U. S. OPEN COMPUTER CHAMPIONSHIP: COMPUTER WARS

Before you run out and buy your next chess computer let me give you the surprise results of the U. S. Open Computer Championship recently held during June 21-23 in Mobile, Alabama. A microcomputer won!!

Elite X "C" bested the field, which included three mainframes, with a 5.5-.5 score, earning honors for best new program and best dedicated (solely chess-playing) machine. Belle of Bell Labs, N. J., the pre-tournament favorite fell to Bee Bee, an Illinois mainframe, in the final round, allowing Bee Bee a clear second with 4.5 points. Bee Bee's loss came from her encounter with the Elite X. Fidelity's "PC" Experimental, which runs on Apple computers, scored 2.5 for the best result by a personal computer program.

Expect a big strength increase in micro computers resulting from the incorporation of the Fidelity Elite X "C". So don't jump on the first "plays-expert-or-better-offer." For an idea of what I'm speaking of, consider page 57 of the August edition of Chess Life & Review. There is a full page ad extolling the virtues of the Turbostar 432. It according, to the ad, turned in a "performance rating of 2300 at the Mobile Chess Championship." Well, maybe so. But, look among the tournament results below and wonder at just how impressive that result really is, considering the Turbo's 2.5 out of 6 results. Also, this certainly makes one wonder about the power of the mass of computers stacked above it. Maybe they play grandmaster level.

FINAL TOURNAMENT STANDINGS:

Here Gullette springs an ancient trap on his young opponent. The poisoned flesh is initially resisted but finally proves too tempting. A few mistakes were made in the opening phases, but the game illustrates well the evils of early castling and lagging development. Actually Gullette's mistakes came from having too many winning courses.

TENNESSEE POSTAL CHESS

with Kent Meadows

Before we start, I must state that last issue's "our USCF OFFICE" contained an imposter! I did not go to New York. I have never been further north than Mammoth Cave, Kentucky. I believe the misprint intended to mention Kent McCormack rather than Lord Kent himself. I'm sure McCormack is quite flattered to be confused with the great Postal Chess God, but, alas, he is only mortal, and the picture is his, not mine.

I'm sure many of you remember the old western "Major Dundee" starring Charlton Heston, Richard Harris, James Coburn, and Senta Berger. Do you remember the Apache chief? Every time the Apaches kicked the hell out of the cavalry, he would step out from the shadows and boast "Who will stand against me now?!!!" Well, when Lord Kent receives that sad, tear-stained postcard with the words "I resign" written on it, that's what he says, too. I stand in a chair (standing on the card, of course) and yell "Who will stand against me now?!!!" Wouldn't you like to be able to yell that too? Don't you want to be brave like Lord Kent? Well, if you want to be a tough, tough genius-hero like your friend and humble narrator and play real he-man chess, send $6.00 (and $4.00 more if not a TCA member) to: Kent Meadows, 206 30th Avenue North, Nashville, TN 37803.

You play six games in a preliminary section with three other players—two games versus each, one game with each colour. All entry fees are returned to the top three finalists. You qualify for the finals by scoring four or more points out of your six games. You may enter more than one section. Please include your USCF O-T-B or other postal rating. Enter today, you'll be glad ya did.

All joking aside, I would like to say that I have enjoyed my five years as postal director, and I hope that I have served you postal players in a satisfactory manner. I hope that I have satisfactorily served Tennessee chess players as a member of the board of directors. It was an honor to serve you!! Well, until later, this is the ruler of the water and, the Lord Humungous, the Ayatollah of Rock'n Rollah signing off! Play chess.
